

May you be peaceful

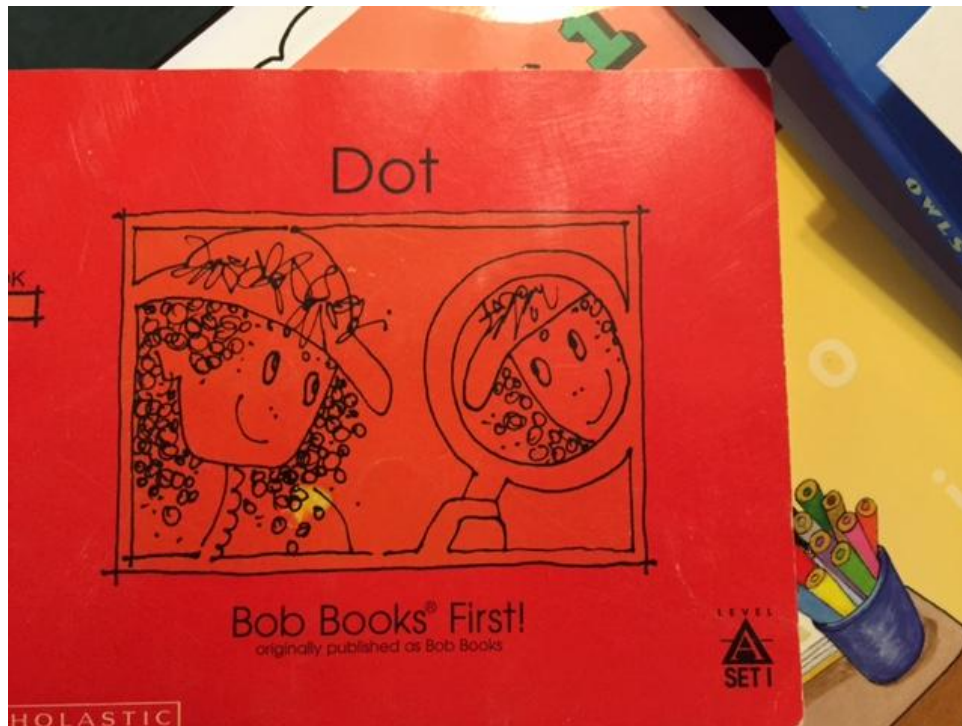

Peacock
Love Notes

March 5, 2015

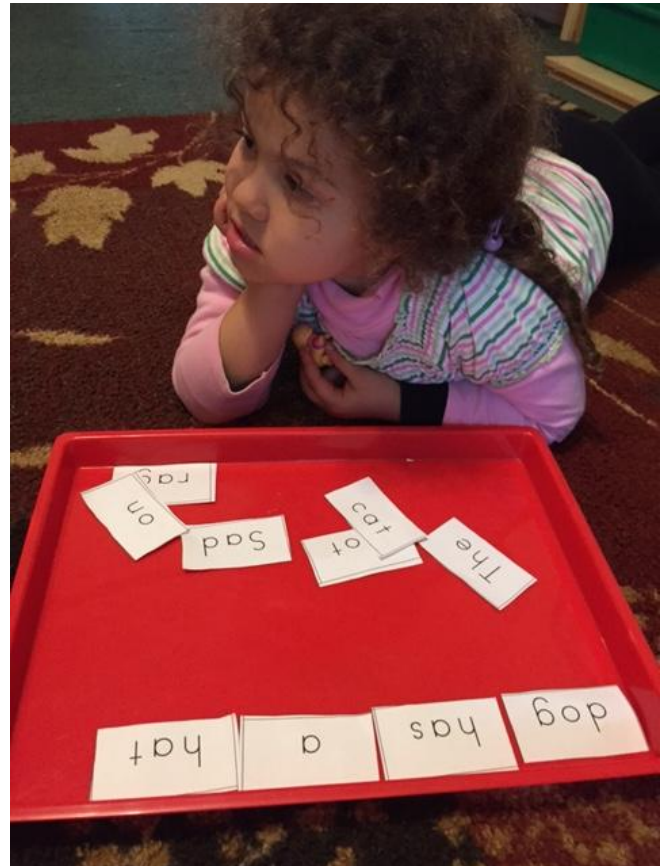

||

We have a new "I Choose Self-control board" in our Safe Place. With the help of "cranky cream" and new calm down strategies we continue to work toward self-regulation. We also made lavender scented play doh. Ask your child to show you how to do "pretzel", "balloon" and "drain."

We read book #3 in the first Bob Book set this week and have been working with the words in the book.

Dr. Seuss Day

To celebrate the birthday of Dr. Seuss, we made our own one fish, two fish books and cooked green eggs and ham. No one ate the green eggs and ham except for Deborah, so we do not like green eggs and ham, evidently!

We went to Wheatsville Food Coop this week on a field trip connected to our yearlong theme, What's for Dinner. We learned about eating foods that are in season in our area, and many other things about how a grocery store functions. We got to taste fruit, milk, cheese, bread, green smoothies and popcorn tofu. It was a really great trip.

ai, ai, what did you say?

We are reading words with the vowel digraph ai in them in addition to all the words in the book Dot.

and the other big news....

I know why the caged bird sings.

The Peaceful Peacocks have a new class pet. It is a pretty green parakeet. We named her

Lola

building numbers

With a field trip and an ice day, we didn't have much time for math this week, but we worked with bead strips to build numbers. There were over 500 possible numbers that could have been built with the materials provided for the activity.

and finally...

We began learning a new song....“Cat’s Sleep Anywhere.” We had a sweet library book to help us visualize all the places a cat might choose to bunk down, and our own Sid was happy to become a model.

